

INSTRUCTIONS TO AUTHORS

PSYCHOANALYTIC REVIEW

CONTENT: The Psychoanalytic Review publishes peer-reviewed contributions to the literature on psychoanalytic theory and practice, including interdisciplinary applications that advance psychoanalysis as a body of knowledge and therapeutic discipline. Articles report original research on relevant theoretical questions; clearly communicate new clinical hypotheses, observations, or approaches; advance issues within psychoanalytic education; and enhance the total understanding of human behavior. The Psychoanalytic Review accepts depth psychological manuscripts on a wide range of theoretical, clinical and cultural concerns. Research methodologies may be quantitative or qualitative, as well as based on individual cases when persuasively applied to a general topic within the journal's purview. On occasion, articles or concurrently published commentaries on articles may be invited, as are the contributions to Special Issues. The Psychoanalytic Review also critiques pertinent books and films.

MANUSCRIPTS should be submitted electronically to the Editor, Alan J. Barnett, Ph.D., at ThePsychoanalyticReview@npap.org. Send the manuscript as an attachment in Microsoft Word or Word compatible format. If e-mail is not available, authors may forward hard copies of the manuscript, in triplicate, to The Editor, The Psychoanalytic Review, 40 West 13th Street, New York, NY 10011. Authors should retain a copy of the manuscript. Manuscripts should be double-spaced, including quotations and references, with at least a one-inch margin on all sides. Notes and references should conform to the style of recent issues of this publication. Effort should be made to keep notes at a minimum. The reference list should include only those sources that are cited in the text. Provide an abstract of about 100 words, and a brief biographical note with the authors' academic degrees, professional titles, affiliations, and mailing addresses. To contact the editor directly, please email: Alanbarnett@aol.com

PERMISSIONS: Contributors are responsible for obtaining permission from copyright owners if they use an illustration, table, or lengthy quote (100+ words) that has been published elsewhere. Contributors should write both the publisher and author of such material, requesting nonexclusive world rights in all languages for use in the article and in all future editions of it.

PATIENT CONFIDENTIALITY: It is the author's responsibility to disguise the identity of patients when presenting case material. See, e.g., Clifft, M. A. (1986). Writing about psychiatric patients: Guidelines for disguising case material. Bulletin of the Menninger Clinic, 50, 1-13 (posted on Guilford Website); or Kantrowitz, J.L. (2004). Writing about patients: I. Ways of protecting confidentiality and analysts' conflicts over choice of method. Journal of the American Psychoanalytic Association, 52, 69-99.

NOTE: Articles will be accepted only if they are contributed solely to The Psychoanalytic Review. The editor should be notified if the article has already appeared in a foreign language journal or has been submitted elsewhere. The journal does not typically republish material and will not consider for publication in the journal any material previously published on the internet, whether self-published on an author site or appearing on a pay-per-view site or a research site used by a university or society, since there are no clear criteria at this time with which to distinguish these with respect to enforcing copyright and publication rights. After a paper is published in the print edition of The Psychoanalytic Review, there is a six month embargo on posting papers on-line on an author site, pay-per-view site or research site of a university or society. Permission is granted to republish online after six months, provided credit is given to the Review for its original publication (including year, volume, and page numbers).
